

Healthiest Nutrition Possible!

Posted by Kaity

“My bun was having issues with “poopy butt.” He also needed to eat more hay so I knew I needed a food that was hay based not soy based. As soon as we got steady on Sherwood we didn’t have “poopy butt” anymore and noticed softer fur! I noticed a change in personality. He was more energetic and playful! My bun seems much happier and I know he is getting the healthiest nutrition possible. Thank you again!”

“Molly, a 4 year old guinea pig with chronic urinary sludge and infections was on a popular alfalfa-free pellet and suffering from sludge at the slightest increase of calcium in her diet. She had to be on antibiotics occasionally to fight off urinary tract infections. While most hesitate to feed a pellet with Alfalfa to a sludge-prone pig, I already knew that it wasn't the calcium or Alfalfa causing her problems; Sure enough, since switching Molly to Sherwood, she has been able to eat lettuce again without a trace of sludge. Not only is she healthier but she is happier since making the switch. She can have all her favorite veggies again and has lost the sagging belly that she had for over a year.”

Great Food for my 3 Chinnies

“I’ve been feeding my babies xxxxx for a few years, but I noticed my one fluff had weird, mucousy poos once in awhile so I decided to try switching to this. It took a bit for them to decide it was edible, but they all seem to love it now and I have yet to see a weird poo during playtime, no one is overweight or underweight, their fur is soft and gorgeous, and they all have a ton of energy.”

The Natural Diet

Rabbits and other small herbivores are adapted to a diet that is a mix of grasses (like timothy) and legumes (like clover or alfalfa).

This improves digestive, urinary, and overall health. You'll see the difference in their fur coat and they'll be more playful and active.
